Threat Watch

KIDNAPPING FOR RANSOM

Kidnapping has remained the most virulent form of banditry in Nigeria. It is evident that kidnapping for ransom and extortion is unrelenting and more worrisome is the fact that the security agencies seem to lack the capacity and have no clear-cut strategy to rein in this pervasive security threat. 22 cases were reported in September with at least 56 people kidnapped. Kidnapping hotbeds include the Abuja – Kaduna road which connects the federal capital to the North-west states. Birnin Gwari area in Kaduna State has now become synonymous with violent deaths. Taraba, Zamfara, Sokoto and Gombe roads are also impassable at the moment.

HERDERS/FARMERS CLASHES

While the frequency of clashes has reduced substantively, the underlying causes of the constant clashes between farmers and herders are yet to be fully resolved. In September, attacks were recorded in Jigawa, Plateau, Delta and Ekiti. By the day, it is increasingly more difficult to make a distinction between core clashes and banditry as there have been strong links between clashes and kidnapping and killings. Violence between Nigerian herders and farmers has escalated, killing more than 1,400 people since January 2019.

ARMED ROBBERY

The preceding months to the end of the year statistically experience a spike in robbery related crime and this is already evident in reported robbery incident in August where reported cases jumped by 25%. While this is marginal increase, the data is expected to increase exponentially as the year draws to a close. This is due to a last desperate attempt of the individuals to end the year on a high and celebrate festivities in grand style.

XENOPHOBIC REPRISAL ATTACKS

Following a wave of violent xenophobic attacks that occurred in South Africa where businesses owned by black Africans – including Nigerians were looted and destroyed, while several lives were lost. This led to a wave of violent reprisal attacks on south African owned businesses in Nigeria where goods worth millions of Naira were looted and destroyed. While these seems to have been nipped in the bud by Nigerian Police force, a fresh attack in south Africa might further heighten the tension in Nigeria.

CIVIL UNREST

The revolution now protest may have come and gone and the masterminds in prison, but what is clear is that a distrust a distrust in the Nigerian political and by extension security system has been born thereby incubating many disgruntled and angry masses that are awaiting the slightest opportunity to disrupt law and order. With the proliferation of arms across every quarter of Nigeria, an uprising will be catastrophic.

North-East Incident Review

Expert Analysis

Continuous offensive attacks/counter attacks between the Nigerian Military and Boko Haram terrorist persisted in September.

On 5th of September, the insurgents laid ambush on a military convoy near General Buratai village killing 1 soldier and injuring 3. Following this attack, 2 Nigerian soldiers were killed in clashes with the terrorist in Yobe State. On 7th of September, the ISWAP fraction attacked Gajiram on both Wednesday and Thursday, killing three soldiers and a police officer.

In a counter offensive move, the troops of the Nigerian Army shot dead at least seven commanders of the Boko Haram insurgents in the Lake Chad region of Borno State, including the Islamic State trainer and a fighter from Mali. The troops also carried out air offensive against terrorist elements in Borno neutralized scores of terrorists and destroyed their hideouts in separate air strikes conducted at Durbada (also known as Bula Mongoro), Abaganaram and Tumbun Rego in Borno State.

Recall that Boko Haram began its bloody insurgency in northeastern Nigeria in 2009, and spread into neighboring Niger, Chad and Cameroon, prompting a regional military response.

Boko Haram split into two factions in mid-2016. One, led by long-time leader Abubakar Shekau, is notorious for suicide bombings and indiscriminate killings of civilians.

Shekau pledged allegiance to ISIS leader Abu Bakr Al-Baghdadi in March 2015, but ISIS central only gives formal backing to the other faction, which it calls Islamic State West Africa Province.

Boko Haram and ISWAP have been responsible for more than 35,000 deaths since 2011. More than two million people have been displaced, sparking a dire humanitarian crisis in the region.

North-West Incident Review

Expert Analysis

According to the United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR), the number of refugees from North-West Nigeria seeking safety in the neighboring Niger Republic has doubled to over 40,000 persons over the last ten months. On September 11 alone, more than 2,500 people fled when civilians were targeted by armed groups in Sokoto, Zamfara, and Katsina claims UNCHR.

Kaduna-Abuja road is the new haven of Kidnappers and bandit with multiple attacks reported on the road casing commuters to completely abandon the route while others embark on their trip to and fro using rail. In September alone, no less than 18 people were abducted on the road

Taking a cue from relative success recorded in Zamfara, other state governments in the North-west including like Sokoto and Katsina are also negotiating with the armed bandits and have done prisoner swaps with them. The swaps have involved the release of arrested armed bandits in exchange for tens of persons kidnapped by the bandits

North-Central Incident Review

Expert Analysis

As with North West region, activities of bandits and kidnappers appears to be unrelenting in the states of the North Central. There exist a rise in attacks especially on Lokoja Abuja road and communities in Kogi and Abuja. There have been reports of kidnapping in Asokoro, Abuja.

In Aseni and Omoko communities along the Lokoja-Abuja highway, on 11th September, 2019, eight people were kidnapped. On 18th September, 11 people were kidnapped with several vehicles destroyed by kidnappers. On the 24th of September, they killed eight people, including a police superintendent, and kidnapped 18 more people.

Halogen, through its intelligence sources gathered that the upsurge in banditry in this region is as a result relocation of bandits from Zamfara and Katsina following peace talks with the government of the states. These further strengthen the argument about the ineffectiveness of the peace pact in those states.

Expert Analysis

South East have been enjoying relative peace since after the exit of the IPOB leader.

The only spotlight of insecurity in the South East has shifted to Ebonyi state following violence attacks on Ukwagba village in Ngbo community by suspected members of Ngbo.

Following this development, over 2,000 persons (excluding children) recently fled their village in the Ohaukwu Local Government Area (LGA) of Ebonyi State for fear of being killed by unknown gunmen.

Ukwagba community is said to have a common boundary with Azadeene village whose occupants have allegedly fled for fear of being killed by the unknown gunmen who had on Saturday massacred nine persons.

Occupants of Ukwagba village, the Ngbo clan, had earlier accused occupants of Azadeene village, the Ezza clan, of invasion.

South-West Incident Review

Expert Analysis

Total breakdown of law and order was experienced in 3 states in the South west between 2nd and 5th of September when angry youths in their hundreds protested the alleged continuous killing of Nigerians in xenophobic attacks in South Africa. The protests which transmogrified into full attacks were targeted at businesses with South African interest in the country.

Halogen intelligence unit gathered that protesters looted and vandalized Shoprite outlets in Sangotedo, Ibadan Mall and operations in other outlet in Osapa London, Maryland, Ikeja, Ibadan etc were grounded with heavy police presence. In Surulere, Lagos, our operatives reported youths numbering over 150 attacked and looted PEP shops at Eric Moore before the police came to disperse them. MTN outlets were vandalized in Ibadan city in southwest. Many other stores owned by Nigerians were also plundered in the raids.

Two people were feared dead in the confrontation between the police and the youths while no fewer than five policemen were taken away injured. More than 60 people were arrested

The incidents set a precedent to how badly economic activities can suffer a massive setback during a civil rebellion such as the 'revolution now' protest being championed by some Nigerians. Hoodlums with intent to hijack any proceeding will always be a threat to such causes.
