Threat Watch

KIDNAPPING FOR RANSOM

It has since become ubiquitous and commercialized. 29 cases were reported in August with at least 41 people kidnapped. It has spread from the Niger Delta to virtually all nooks and crannies of the country, with some states of course being hotspots. Similarly victims have changed from being predominantly foreign oil workers to Nigerians, including parents, grandparents, and toddlers and about anyone who has a relative that could be blackmailed into coughing out a ransom. As the Nigerian security apparatus do not have the enough resources to combat this, this is likely to continue.

HERDERS/FARMERS CLASHES

One of the security threats in the front burner today, remains the recurring crises between cattle herders and farmers. This has since blown into full time banditry. Violence between Nigerian herders and farmers has escalated, killing more than 1,300 people since January 2018. The conflict has evolved from spontaneous reactions to provocations and now to deadlier planned attacks, particularly in Benue, Plateau, Adamawa, Nasarawa and Taraba states.

ARMED ROBBERY

The preceding months to the end of the year statistically experience a spike in robbery related crime and this is already evident in reported robbery incident in August where reported cases jumped by 25%. While this is marginal increase, the data is expected to increase exponentially as the year draws to a close. This is due to a last desperate attempt of the individuals to end the year on a high and celebrate festivities in grand style.

TIV – JUKUM CRISIS

Despite the signing of a peace agreement between Tiv and Jukun leaders on June 11th, inter-communal violence persisted this week between the groups in Wukari. A cycle of retaliatory attacks this week resulted in 22 civilian fatalities. The clashes, which began in April, have continued unabated despite the peace agreement. Without a meaningful peace deal and enforcement by security forces, the groups are likely to continue their attacks on the local civilian population.

CIVIL REBELLION

The revolution now protest may have come and gone and the masterminds in prison, but what is clear is that a distrust a distrust in the Nigerian political and by extension security system has been born thereby incubating many disgruntled and angry masses that are awaiting the slightest opportunity to disrupt law and order. With the proliferation of arms across every quarter of Nigeria, an uprising will be catastrophic.

Summary

Consistent with previous months, Boko Haram's territorial control shrank to small pockets of villages around Lake Chad as a result of sustained government military action, factions of the insurgency group continued to carry out attacks against civilians in the region. In continuation of its sustained efforts to wipe out remnants of Boko Haram terrorists in the North-East, the Air Task Force of Operation Lafiya Dole carried out multiple airstrikes on the terrorists' hideout and killed scores (estimated at 10) of fighters at Alafa on the fringes of the Sambisa Forest in Borno.

Consequently, attacks on civilians has reduced significantly in comparison to previous months.

Summary

Respite may have come the way of residents of Zamfara State recently following a ceasefire agreement between the bandits and the state government with the bandits affirming that the coast was clear for all those displaced by the attacks to return home. In 59 days since the peace talks, no attack has been recorded in the state.

However, intelligence gathering revealed that about six weeks after the peace deal with the bandits in Zamfara, the security situation appears to have shifted to neighboring states like Sokoto and Kebbi and intensified that of Katsina, resulting in several deaths and forcing massive relocation amongst residents. Council areas in Katsina namely, Jibia, Safana, Danmusa, Kankara, Faskari, Dandume, Sabuwa and Batsari; and three of them, Safana, Danmusa and Kankara in the last two months, have recorded massive attacks, resulting in the loss of lives of close to 70 persons. These areas are said to have become so vulnerable, given their border status to the dreaded Rugu forest that served as a hideout to the bandits.

Summary

At least 44 people were reported dead from over 53 security incidents in this region. About 90% of the death figures were reported in Rivers, Bayelsa and Delta state. This is consistent with other preceding months with only Delta state witnessing a decline in crime in July. Despite appeals by stakeholders and re-enforcement of police personnel, cult gangs have continued to run riot in Khana Local government area of Rivers state. Two communities in Bangha clan, Khana Local Government Area were sacked over the weekend by suspected members of rampaging cult gangs in the area.

South West Incident Review

Summary

For over 6 months, kidnappers and robbers have been plaguing states in the South-West, with incidents spiking in July and August causing governors in the region to call out to security chiefs for help, and even held an emergency summit. It is believed that this spike is caused by current concerted operations of the police and other security agencies across the country, particularly along the Niger-Kogi-FCT-Kaduna-Kastina and Zamfara areas have engendered a dispersal and relocation of some of the criminals to new localities including the South-West.

The larger security challenge is being faced in Lagos, and neighboring South West states. There has been an upsurge in the number of kidnapping cases within the geopolitical zone, putting residents on edge. Bandits, perpetrating their crimes, scout for victims from Lagos to Ondo, Osun to Ekiti, Oyo and Ogun states, using every available space, bush, forest and abandoned properties as their lairs. Isolated roads and highways such as the Ilesha-Akure road, Ikorodu-Epe, as well as the waterways of areas like Arepo, Ikorodu, Epe among others that link Lagos and Ogun states have continuously served as their haunts.
